

Portable Storage Has Many Benefits

There are many benefits to using portable storage. Moving is easier with portable storage, whether you are going across the world or just across town. Transporting your belongings to and from college in a portable storage unit is easy.

The problems that other storage units pose can be daunting and unlimited. Take for instance a moving truck. Renting a moving truck can be costly, upwards of twenty dollars per day. Sixty dollars is a common monthly charge for use of a portable storage unit. With a moving truck, you must also think about where your belongings will go once they arrive at their new destination. With portable storage you have a self contained place to keep your things, indefinitely.

Free delivery of the unit from your current residence to a new place is often free while renting. This service is virtually unheard of for moving services and truck rentals. Rental trucks often must be driven by the renter in order to get the best bargain for the money.

Without experience as a professional mover, mistakes are inevitable for most of us. Our possessions could be damaged if we make the mistake of packing our rental truck incorrectly. Often portable storage companies offer professional movers to come pack your items for a flat rate. Often these companies will even unload your items at the new destination as part of the same fee. It is a good idea to shop around for bargains to be sure you are getting the best deal.

Storage comes in many sizes to fit various needs. College students have many belongings that they may not be able to fit in a dorm room. If a student resides far from campus, he or she may have to go via plane. Most of us could not fit even our most prized possessions in the single bag allowed on board an aircraft. A mobile unit could solve this problem perfectly.

Some people may think that it is easier to store belongings in remote lock and key facilities. It is possible that lock and key storage facilities might be more easily robbed or broken into. Since there are many possessions stored together in one place, it would be an easy target for thieves. The security of portable units is superior in that they are typically stored on your own property.

The most durable, convenient and cost effective choice for storage is a portable unit.
