

Bridal shower invitation for your party

Part of the fun of giving a bridal shower to your friend is the honor of inviting some of her closest friends and female relatives. After you are done with all the details and have prepared everything like a good general, now comes the part where you invite people. You may be asking why it is important to leave the invitation as the last task. Well, for practicality's sake you would not want the hassle of calling everyone and then resend another invitation should you have to move the date to another day. Also, of course you want a successful party where everything is perfect, right? So it means the invitation too. Therefore for it to match your perfect party, it would be better to have the invitation last. Supposing you suddenly changed your mind and decided to give a theme bridal shower invitation. Of course you want to inform your guest properly then and of course to have a matching theme invitation. In other words, if you still have not sent out the invitation, you can still make as many changes as you want with the party.

The first thing that you should do before you write on the invitation is to make a list of the people who will be invited. To make sure you have not left someone uninvited, you start by asking the bride for list of. Then with the list on your hand, go over it with the bride so you can make sure that these people would also be invited in the wedding. If you invite someone not invited for the wedding, well, that would be quite embarrassing for the bride. Now after you have the list, you should now have the proper wordings for the invitation. Make sure you have the bride's full name, date of your party, the time of the party, where the party will be and the RSVP details on your invitation. Then you also might want to include the theme of the party and the gifts, if it is a theme party. And do not forget your name as the host of the bridal shower. If you are giving a surprise party, make sure you give explicit instructions and details to the guests so that they will be able to arrive earlier than the bride. Lastly, make sure your invitation will be received by the guests ahead of time so that they will have the time to arrange their schedules, to buy gifts and to prepare.
